The Great Promise

Lesson for December 11, 1960

NOTHING that happens is a surprise to God. Human beings are sometimes surprised when they need not be. The birth of Jesus was surely no surprise to God, for it was he that planned it. It need not have astonished any one, for it had been promised.

Dr. Foreman

The trouble was, nobody had looked for just this kind of answer to their long prayers—long in the sense that for centuries the Jewish people had been praying for a Deliverer (that is what "Savior" means in the Bible). Furthermore, this Deliverer had been promised, for many of the prophets had pointed forward to the coming of One to whom they gave various names—Son of David, God's Anointed, God's Servant, Shepherd, and so on. One of the names was not a name, it simply expressed the great hope in a word: He that is coming (all one word in Greek or Heb

Peace and Justice

The problem at this point may turn the mind to thinking about what Jesus really means to Christians now and eventually to the world. The problem, to make it short, is this: Why was it that the Jews, the very people who had cherished the Great Promise, the Hope of "One who is to come," the people in whose sacred books alone this Promise was preserved, the people whose prophets had pointed down the future to that great Coming—why was it that these very people of the Promise failed to see the fulfillment of that Promise when it came to pass?

One reason was that they expected everything to happen all at once. For example: In Isaiah 9, one of the famous prophecies about the Coming One, any reader can see the hope and expectation of justice, righteousness and peace. The coming Savior will set up a kingdom of peace and of justice. But when Jesus came he was born in a stable because of an injustice on the part of the government; and he died as a criminal, again because of probably the most unjust death sentence in the history of the world. Looking at the world today, peace and justice still seem far off. What has happened to the Great Promise?

Short Perspective, Long History

Travelers in very dry flat country have noticed that distances are deceptive. You see a watertank or a tower or a hill apparently a mile or so down the road, but the thing just seems to back away from you. The mile or two may turn into 25 miles before you reach it. What the prophets did not say (and maybe did not see) was the perspective: they had no time table of things to come. So when justice and peace did not descend on the world all at once when Jesus came, many thought then, and many nowadays think, that he couldn't be the One that God intended.

The Mighty God?

Another reason w... found it hard to see that the Great Promise of a Savior was fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth is the presence in some of the prophecies—Isaiah 9 notable among them—of something more than hinting that this Coming One was going to be far more than man, indeed more than God. The "child, the son" of Isaiah 9:6 is presently named "Mighty God, Everlasting Father." How can this be? And can we believe such high things of the Carpenter of Nazareth? Yes, we can believe it, we do believe it. But what the Christian church has come to see (not to understand, it passes human understanding) is something that most people in his life-time did not see: namely, that God does not always make himself known in awesome and terrible ways, but in gentle, yes even humble ways. The wonderful truth which the Christian accepts is that this Carpenter of Nazareth, not only on the occasion of great miracles but every day in all the things he did and said, was God himself upon earth. We believe that Christ was saying the truth when he said, "He who has seen me has seen the Father."
